Khutlisa prepared it for the claimant to review and sign. It has not been sent to California or to anyone else, and Khutlisa never signs for anyone. The claimant creates the claim on California's own website, signs California's Claim Affirmation Form, and sends it with the documents listed inside.

Inside: the property details from the public record, the claimant's details, the checklist of documents California asks for in this case, a signing and notary guide, and where to send the claim.

Status	California asks for	What the documents show
Partly proven	Your photo identification	Photo identification: sample_staff_badge.png The name on it, Amihan Dalisay, matches the owner's name on the record, shown here as D··· A···. The reader questioned it: It is a hospital staff identification badge, not government-issued photo identification. It was issued by Bayview Mercy Hospital, which is not a government authority. The name on it, Amihan Dalisay, only partly matches the name you gave, Amihan Dalisay Villareal. It does not present itself as identification issued by a government (a passport, a national identity card or a driver licence). It expired on 2019-06-14. California asks for current identification.
Still needed	Your Social Security number, or form W-8BEN if you have none	No document has been added for this.
Still needed	Proof of your current mailing address	No document has been added for this.
Partly proven	Proof of a link to the address on the record Asked for if you have it	Photo identification: sample_staff_badge.png The name on it, Amihan Dalisay, matches the owner's name on the record, shown here as D··· A···. It was issued by Bayview Mercy Hospital, the holder that reported the money. It is dated 2009-06-15 (issued). The reader questioned it: It is a hospital staff identification badge, not government-issued photo identification. It was issued by Bayview Mercy Hospital, which is not a government authority. It does not show the Daly City, CA address the money was reported under.

The tie to the record

No government photo identification read so far carries the name on the record, shown here as D··· A···.

What is still missing

The photo identification you added (sample_staff_badge.png) does not settle "Your photo identification". The reader questioned it: It is a hospital staff identification badge, not government-issued photo identification. It was issued by Bayview Mercy Hospital, which is not a government authority. The name on it, Amihan Dalisay, only partly matches the name you gave, Amihan Dalisay Villareal. It does not present itself as identification issued by a government (a passport, a national identity card or a driver licence). It expired on 2019-06-14. California asks for current identification.

A colour copy of the first and last page of your valid passport would close it.

No document shows a Social Security or taxpayer number.

A Social Security card or an ITIN letter would close it. If you have no United States tax number, a completed and signed IRS form W-8BEN closes it instead.

No document shows your current address.

A recent utility bill, bank statement or payslip that shows your name and the address you gave would close it.

The photo identification you added (sample_staff_badge.png) does not settle "Proof of a link to the address on the record". The reader questioned it: It is a hospital staff identification badge, not government-issued photo identification. It was issued by Bayview Mercy Hospital, which is not a government authority. It does not show the Daly City, CA address the money was reported under. California asks for this if you have it; it does not hold the claim back.

A bank statement, utility bill or lease from that address would close it.

No government photo identification read so far carries the name on the record, shown here as D··· A···.

Photo identification issued by a government, in the name on the record, would close it. If you used another name then, add a marriage certificate or a court's change-of-name order that shows both names, with photo identification in your present name.

Points a careful clerk would question

sample_staff_badge.png

It is a hospital staff identification badge, not government-issued photo identification.
The badge shows an expiry date of 2019-06-14, which has passed.

Khutlisa read each document with a language model, which reported only what is printed on it, and then compared the names, addresses and issuer with the claimant's details and the register record in code. Each document is read twice and the two readings must agree. Code also checks the dates, the issuer of identification and, on a passport, that the name field and the machine-readable lines agree. It did not check that any document is genuine. Khutlisa read these documents; it has not verified them with the issuing authority. The holder, not Khutlisa, approves. Identity numbers are not kept.

How to sign and send this claim

Written for a claimant living outside the United States.

1. Start the claim on California's own website to get the official form

California does not give out blank claim forms. You search for the property on claimit.ca.gov, choose Claim, and the site creates a claim number and a Claim Affirmation Form in your name. Khutlisa does not do this step for you and has not done it. Use the property details in this packet to find the right record.

2. Check the form against this packet

The property number, the amount and the company that reported the money should match the property details page. Write your name and current address exactly as they appear on your identification and your proof of address.

3. Sign it yourself

Only you may sign. California in general does not accept a signature made under a power of attorney, and Khutlisa never signs for anyone.

4. Have your signature notarised

California requires a notarised signature when the claim is worth US$1,000 or more. Do not sign until you are in front of the notary. The form's notary section is written for a notary in the United States. The Controller's pages do not say which notaries outside the United States it accepts, so ask the Controller before you pay for one: +1 916 323 2827 is its number for callers outside the United States. The routes people abroad commonly use are a notarial appointment at a United States embassy or consulate, or a notary in your own country with an apostille. Neither is confirmed on the Controller's pages.

5. Translate what is not in English

California asks for a certified English translation of any identity document or death certificate in another language, and may ask you to have foreign documents authenticated.

6. Send the signed form and the documents yourself

Mail them to the address on the last page of this packet, or use the upload link California gives you with the claim number. Keep a copy of everything and note the claim number.

7. Wait for California's answer

California says a cash claim by the owner can take as little as 30 to 60 days, and that claims by heirs or businesses generally take up to 180 days from the day it has every document.

How California pays

California pays by a paper cheque, which it calls a warrant, mailed to the address on the claim form. It states that there is no direct deposit.

It can mail the cheque to another country, and says it may ask for more documents when it does.

It pays no interest and withholds no tax. A debt to a California state or local agency can be taken out of the payment first.

A State Controller's cheque is valid for one year from the day it is issued.
